

Advisory Panel to FPI's Immigrant Research Initiative

Algernon Austin is a senior researcher at the Thurgood Marshall Institute of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. Austin conducts social science research and writing across a range of areas relevant to civil rights, policy development, public education, and advocacy.

Hamutal Bernstein is a research associate at the Urban Institute. Bernstein is a principal investigator on the Annual Survey of Refugees and Survey Redesign for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and leads mixed-methods research and evaluation on immigrant integration and workforce development.

Tanya Broder is senior attorney at the National Immigration Law Center. She specializes in the laws and policies affecting access to health care, public benefits, education and driver's licenses for low-income immigrants across the United States.

Muzaffar Chishti is director of the Migration Policy Institute's office at the New York University School of Law, and is former director of the immigration project at UNITE. Chishti has written, testified, and worked extensively on immigration issues.

Daniel Costa is director of immigration law and policy research at the Economic Policy Institute. His areas of research include governance of temporary labor migration programs, both high- and less-skilled migration, worksite enforcement, and immigrant workers' rights, as well as farm labor, global multilateral processes related to migration, and refugee and asylum issues.

Gregory DeFreitas is professor of economics and director of the labor studies program at Hofstra University. DeFreitas is author of Hispanics at Work: Hispanics in the U.S. Labor Force, and Young Workers in the Global Economy: Job Challenges in North America, Europe and Japan.

Nancy Foner is distinguished professor of sociology at Hunter College and the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, and is author of From Ellis Island to JFK: New York's Two Great Waves of Immigration and In a New Land: A Comparative View of Immigration.

Leighton Ku is a professor of health policy at George Washington University and is director of the Center for Health Policy Research. Ku has conducted research about immigrant health, health and Medicaid reform, health economics and related health policy topics.

Jeffrey S. Passel is senior demographer at the Pew Research Center, and is author of many of the most frequently cited studies of undocumented immigrants in the United States.

Max J. Pfeffer is professor of development sociology at Cornell University, and is an expert on farm workers in New York State.

Renato Rocha is senior policy analyst at the Center for Law and Social Policy, where his work focuses on access to public benefits for immigrant families. Rocha serves as the interim deputy campaign director of the Protecting Immigrant Families, Advancing Our Future (PIF) coalition and helps coordinate the PIF coalition's research working group.

Jo-Ann Yoo is executive director of the Asian American Federation. Her professional experiences have been in the fields of community development and immigrant rights.

Thank you to past members of FPI's Advisory Panel:

Jared Bernstein, member of the president's Council of Economic Advisors and former senior fellow of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Maralyn Edid, former senior extension associate at Cornell University's Industrial and Labor Relations (ILR) school.

Hector Figueroa, former president of Local 32BJ of the Service Employees International Union and early in his career economist with the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union. (dec.)

Philip Kasinitz, professor of sociology, CUNY Graduate Center, and author of Caribbean New York: Black Immigrants and the Politics of Race and co-author of numerous books on immigration.

Peter Kwong, author of Chinese America: The Untold Story of America's Oldest New Community and Chinese Americans: An Immigrant Experience, co-authored with Dušanka Miščević. (dec.)

Ray Marshall, former U.S. secretary of labor and Audre and Bernard Rapoport Centennial Chair in Economics and Public Affairs at the University of Texas, Austin.

John H. Mollenkopf, distinguished professor of political science and sociology at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York and director of the Center for Urban Research. Mollenkopf is author or editor of fifteen books on urban politics, urban policy, immigration, and New York City.

Heidi Shierholz, senior economist and director of policy, Economic Policy Institute, and former chief economist for the U.S. Department of Labor.

Walter Stafford, professor of urban planning and public policy at NYU's Wagner School (dec.)

Rae Rosen, former senior economist and assistant vice president, Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Roger Waldinger, distinguished professor of sociology at UCLA and director of the UCLA Center for the Study of International Migration, and author of The Cross-Border Connection; Strangers at the Gates; Through the Eye of the Needle: Immigrants and Enterprise in New York's Garment Trades, and Still the Promised City? African Americans and New Immigrants in Post-Industrial New York.